

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS TO *OXONIENSIA

Oxfordshire Architectural and Historical Society

GENERAL

1. Oxoniensia is one of the foremost archaeological, architectural, and local history journals in the country. It includes excavation reports, surveys of buildings and standing structures, and articles on the history and topography of Oxford and Oxfordshire. It is published in May each year, before the Annual General Meeting of the OAHS. It is a refereed journal.
2. Copyright and authors' entitlement: Authors will be asked to complete a memorandum of agreement (see below, p. 13) assigning copyright to the Society. Material submitted should not have been published nor the copyright assigned elsewhere. Permission to reproduce material published in Oxoniensia should be sought initially from the Editor and will not be unreasonably withheld. Authors will be sent an electronic version of their work in PDF format and will be entitled to a free copy of the volume in which it appears. In the case of members of OAHS, this will be in addition to that covered by their subscription.
3. Publication Timetable: Articles, reports, and notes should be submitted at the latest by 1 APRIL in the year prior to publication. This is to allow time for contributions to be refereed. Earlier submission would be appreciated. It would be helpful if contributors would alert the Editor to proposed submissions at an early stage, particularly where external funding is required. Oxoniensia usually goes to press in early September for publication the following May.
4. Editorial queries should be addressed to Dr Stephen Miles, St Edmund Hall, Oxford OX1 4AR, e-mail: stephen.miles@history.ox.ac.uk
5. Clarity and conciseness: please write as clearly and concisely as possible and AVOID JARGON (e.g. 'flint mining' is preferable to 'lithic procurement strategy'!)
6. Division into subsections with headings is often desirable in any article and is crucial in conveying the structure of technical reports. The standard levels of subheadings used are: (1) Capitals (2) Italics (3) Italics preceding the text on the same line.

REPORTS

A published report is NOT the same thing as a 'grey literature' client report. It is aimed at a much wider general readership, and it entails a higher standard of intellectual coherence, post-excavation specialist reports, contextualization, and general finish and polish. Poorly structured and ill-digested reports create publication backlogs and funding problems, waste editorial time, and fail to retain the interest even of the specialist, let alone the general reader.

The following points should be borne in mind:

- LENGTH - please consider how much material merits inclusion, and how much can legitimately be left in the project archive. Bulky, long, or technical reports may be better published elsewhere as monographs.
- FUNDING - it is essential when formulating the initial tender to estimate the potential funding needs to see the report through to publication. That includes drawing the finds, getting a proper pottery report, drawing up plans and sections, or writing a conclusion which sets the site in its broader archaeological, and, if appropriate, historical context.
- CLARITY - a report must be written in good English: clear, grammatical, and avoiding jargon. Improving literary style should not be the job of the Editor.
- CONSISTENCY - Please ensure that the report is internally consistent by cross-checking context numbers between plans, sections, and accompanying text. It is worrying how often - even in some published reports - layer and feature numbers fail to march up when the report is analysed closely.
- DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS - these should be presented at the beginning of the report to draw out the principal interest of the findings in a way that allows readers to judge if they want to delve deeper into more technical specialist material in subsequent sections (which will be in a smaller font size). They should be written when all specialist reports, radiocarbon dates, etc. are available. They should be based on a careful weighing-up of all the evidence, which takes account of problems and discrepancies rather than ignoring or side-stepping them. It is often best to invite historians to write historical conclusions.

- ILLUSTRATIONS, TABLES, AND GRAPHS - must be carefully designed to illustrate the text, AND TO CLARIFY INTERPRETATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS. Please ensure that technical illustrations are legible and informative. They MUST BE NUMBERED CONSECUTIVELY THROUGHOUT THE REPORT, rather than separately within each appendix.
- REFERENCES - please note that publication places as well as dates need to be given when citing secondary works.

SUBMISSION

1. Title-page: Every submission should be preceded by a title-page containing (1) the full title of the article, report, or note; (2) the author's name in the form in which it should appear; (3) the author's position and employing institution, if appropriate; (4) the author's address, e-mail address, and phone number; (5) a suggested contraction, if the title is a long one, for use as a running head.
2. Summary: All articles and reports should be preceded by a short summary of between 100 and 400 words. This should outline the subject matter and chief findings.
3. Presentation of text: two copies of the text should be submitted in the first instance on A4 paper, typed or word-processed in double line spacing on one side of the paper only. This will enable editorial comments to be marked up for the author's attention. Please note that e-mail attachments are NOT acceptable. The final version should be submitted on CD-Rom in PC format - i.e., Word Perfect, Word, or RTF.
Tables should be submitted in a separate file on disk rather than as part of the text. They should be consecutively numbered and given an explanatory heading. They will usually have to be reset. Please bear in mind the print area of an Oxoniensia page - 135x195 mm.
Print sizes: there are three of these (for examples, see Oxoniensia, 60 (1995), pp. 1-5 or pp. 392-5). In general, a small typeface is used for details of archaeological reports and finds etc., a larger typeface for general discussions or narrative.
4. Illustrations: Please note the following points:

- Permissions - the author is responsible for obtaining any necessary permissions to reproduce illustrations. Letters granting permission should be forwarded to the Editor.
- Reproduction fees - the author will normally be expected to meet any reproduction fees involved.
- Page area - illustrations should be prepared with the Oxoniensia page area of 195 x 135 mm in mind, which should include allowance for a printed caption. They may be portrait or landscape. In exceptional circumstances illustrations may exceed these dimensions, but only by about 5 mm.
- Format - illustrations should be submitted as digital files in TIFF or JPEG format. Mono scans should be Greyscale TIFF. EPS FILES ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE.
- Scanning resolution should be 300 dpi at output size - i.e., the size that the image will reproduce in the publication.
 - Minimum highlight dot 4%
 - Maximum shadow dot 95%
 - Scanning at higher resolutions will not in any way improve the amount of detail captured by the scanner, but will only increase file sizes, which will cause problems with output.
- Line work should be scanned as 1 bit TIFFs with a resolution of 1200 dpi recommended.
- Lettering should be computer-printed or typed. Handwritten lettering is not normally acceptable.
- Drawings should include a scale, and maps should include a north point.
- Colour - Where there is a particular reason to use colour this should be discussed with the Editor in advance. The extra cost of colour is usually expected to be met by contributors, but grants may be obtainable.
- Numbering - all illustrations, whether drawings, diagrams, graphs, or photographs, should be consecutively numbered as Fig. 1, 2, etc.
- Position - there must be a clear indication in the margin of the text of where each illustration should be placed.
- Reduction - illustrations should be submitted together with hard copy at the reduction required.
- Captions to figures should be submitted on a separate sheet and in a separate file on disk, and should be kept as succinct as possible. Since captions are typeset, please do not include a caption or title on the illustration itself.

Please note that files must be PC rather than Mac compatible.

HOUSE STYLE AND CONVENTIONS

These notes are based closely on New Hart's Rules: the Handbook of Style for Writers and Editors (Oxford, 2005) and New Oxford Dictionary for Writers and Editors (Oxford, 2005).

THE MAIN TEXT

1. Capital letters: a capital letter is required for (i) PERSONS, where a title or rank refers to an individual identifiable from the context: e.g. the King, referring to Charles I in a paper about Civil War Oxford; (ii) NAMES OF GEOGRAPHICAL LOCATIONS AND BUILDINGS: e.g. Bonn Square, the Thames Estuary, the Church of St Thomas the Martyr; (iii) HISTORICAL AND GEOLOGICAL PERIODS: e.g. the Reformation, the Bronze Age, the Middle Ages (but the medieval period); (iv) INSTITUTIONS, POLITICAL PARTIES, ORGANIZATIONS, MOVEMENTS: e.g. Parliament, the Crown, Church and State (as institutions), the Oxford Movement, Conservative, Labour; (v) LAWS, OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS: the Corn Laws, the Factory and Workshop Act 1911; (v) TITLES OF OFFICE AND RANK are generally lower case unless they are used before a name or as a name: Prime Minister Tony Blair, Queen Elizabeth, the Duke of Wellington. Some compound titles also require capital letters: e.g. Chief Justice, Lord Chancellor, Home Secretary.

2. Punctuation

Quotations: Single quotation marks should be used for textual quotations, double for quotations within quotations. Quotations over sixty words/five lines should be indented and do not require quotation marks.

Hyphens: a hyphen is required in compound adjectival phrases of two words - e.g. 'a tenth-century ruler'

Serial commas: a comma is required before 'and' when it occurs in lists - e.g. 'A, B, and C', or 'A and B, C and D, and E', but not where nouns or adjectives are each connected by 'and', as in 'A and B and C'.

Points of omission: three points are used to show an omission in the middle of a sentence in a quotation, but where the omission follows a complete sentence, a full stop, followed by three points should be used.

Apostrophes: when using the possessive case English names ending in 's' require another 's' - e.g. James's. Ancient and classical names, including those ending in 'es', do not require a second 's' - e.g. Mars', Venus', Ceres'.

Use of spaces: single spaces after commas, semi-colons and colons; double spaces should be used after sentences.

3. Spelling

In general this should follow the English rather than the American form, and the aim should be consistency.

Note especially the following:

the suffix `ize' is preferred to `ise', except where the noun includes an `s' - e.g. televise, advertise medieval, NOT mediaeval judgement, NOT judgment acknowledgement NOT acknowledgment focused NOT focussed

4. Abbreviations

If the abbreviation is wholly or partly in lower case and the final letter of the word is the last letter of the abbreviation, no full point is required - e.g. ed (for edited), edn, Mr, Revd (not Rev.), St (for Saint, but NOTE St. for Street). Where the final letter of the word is not used, a full point is required - for example, e.g., cf., pp., tr., fol., col., c. Points are needed for degrees and honours, as in Ph.D., B.A., C.B.E.

If an abbreviation is in capital initials a full point is not usually required - e.g. OAHs, BBC, EEC. Please note that abbreviations such as e.g., cf., i.e., should NOT be used in the main text.

For List of Abbreviations see below, pp. 10-12.

5. Dates, numbers, and figures

Dates should take the following form:

15 August 1876, 15 August, on 15 August

1340s NOT 1340's

c. 1340 [note italic for c.]

AD 250, 250 BC

fourteenth century, NOT 14th century

Numbers - those over 100 should usually be in figures, and those under 100 should be in words. If a passage uses numbers both above and below 100, words or figures should be used consistently throughout. In general, words are used where the sense is descriptive (e.g. 'He had a thousand and one things to do'), and figures for statistical matter and units of measurement.

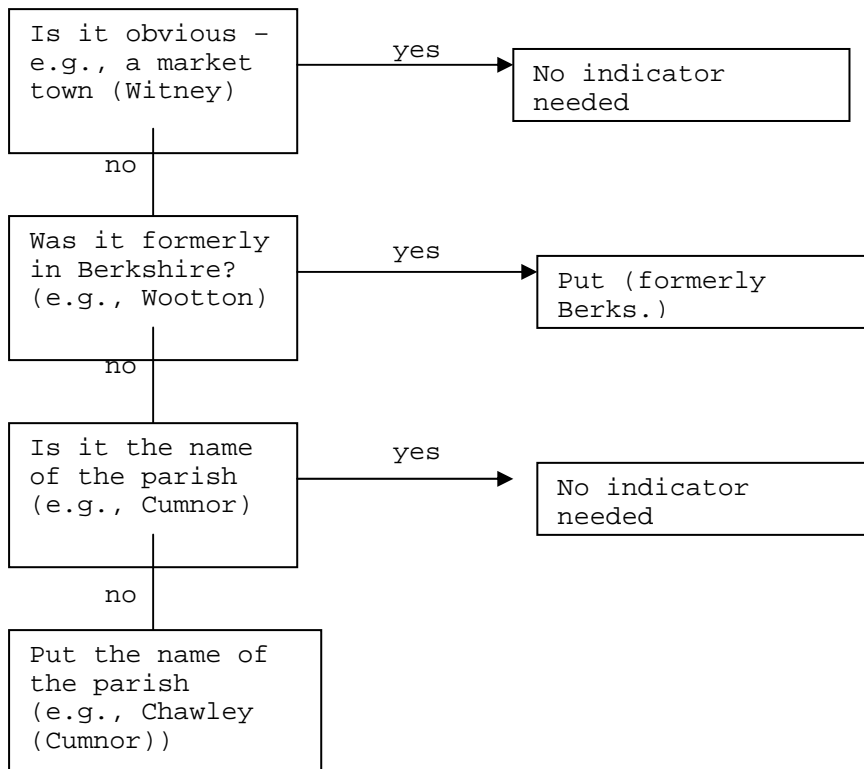

NOTE that where pairs of figures are used they should be in the form 42-3, 1942-3, 1939-45, except for the group 10-19 in each hundred (e.g. 410-11, 1914-18)

Commas are used in numbers of 4 or more digits - e.g. 2,345.

6. Place-names. Spelling of place-names should be consistent. There is also a need to avoid ambiguous locations. In general, Oxfordshire place-names do not need to be identified by county in the text unless there is more than one occurrence of the name in the area - e.g. Whitchurch (Oxfordshire), Whitchurch (Buckinghamshire), Whitchurch (Warwickshire). Where there is more than one occurrence in Oxfordshire (e.g. Wootton) this is usually because one of the occurrences was in the former county of Berkshire, so the convention is to refer to Wootton near Abingdon as Wootton (formerly Berks.). Otherwise the postal town or parish should be given to avoid ambiguity. Small places within the county should be identified by parish. Well-known cities and towns also need no identification. Please identify villages and small towns outside Oxfordshire by county if this is not obvious. Please note that it is preferable to make a location obvious within the text rather than break the flow of the prose by adding a bracketed county identification.

The following may be helpful:

NOTES

Most conventions as set out in the preceding section apply.

Footnotes should be numbered consecutively and typed in single line spacing, leaving ample margins. They should be as clear and concise as possible and not contain material which ought to be in the text.

Textual markers: references to notes in the text should be by superscript Arabic numerals without brackets or punctuation. They should follow punctuation marks - e.g. 'He died in 1572.¹'

References should be precise - e.g. pp. 208-15, rather than pp.

Citations: First names, initials, and surnames of authors should be given as they appear on the publication being cited. Publication place, but not publisher, should be given for book references in order to help readers of the journal to follow up references using OLIS and other online catalogues.

Repeated citations: op cit., art. cit., and loc. cit. should NOT be used. Please use an abbreviated form of the title after the first citation - e.g. Tiller, English Local History, p. 20 Ibid. [in Roman, not italic] should be used for references to the same work in successive notes where appropriate, and idem may be used where works by the same author are cited successively in the same note.

Capital letters: in English book titles nouns and adjectives take capital letters; in article and essay titles they do not.

BOOKS: to identify a particular edition:
Kate Tiller, English Local History: an Introduction, 2nd edn (Stroud, 2002)

Books published as part of a series:
H. E. Salter, ed., Oseney Cartulary, 1, OHS 89, p. 123.

J. C. Barrett and R. J. Radley, Settlement and Society in the British Later Bronze Age, BAR 83, pp. 247-69.

VCH Oxon. 12, pp. 15-19.

ARTICLES AND ESSAYS: italics should be used only for printed books and the titles of journals. Articles within books or journals and unpublished typescripts and dissertations should be cited within single inverted commas.

Note the use of Arabic rather than Roman numerals for the volume numbers of books and journals; the dates should be the volume year not the year of publication (eg., Oxoniensia, 12 (1946-7)).
